NUMBER 101

The latest advices from the bedside of the President confirm the hope that he will recover. Of course his condition is quite critical, but his symptoms continue to grow more favorable; and at this writing (half past two p. m.) the tenor of the Washington dispatches is that more confidence than ever is expressed in regard to his recovery. He sleeps well, is rational, and appears to be full of hope. The question as to the location of the ball has not been settled. Dr. Hamilton, of New York, one of the best authorities in the United States on gun-shot wounds, and Surgeon General Barnes, of the United States army, holding different opinions. Dr. Hamilton believes it is in the cavity of the abdomen and therefore can not be extracted; while Surgeon General Barnes holds that the ball is imbedded in the right lobe of the liver and that it may be ultimately extracted. It appears to be the opinion of the physicians that all depends upon his strength and powers of endurance. These, like his manly courage and Christian hope, are great, and the prayers of millions of people in all parts of the world are with him.

While the President of the United States is struggling between life and death, it is a time when political intrigue and ambition for office should cease. The shortest dispatch of condolence, and yet the one which contains the most meaning, was the one sent from Europe by Whitelaw Reid to Mrs. Garfield—“Love, hope, sympathy.”

If the Republicans at Albany want to do an act which will elicit the applause of the country, they will bring the senatorial contest to a speedy end by electing two good men Senators. The earlier this is done the better it will be for the reputations of the Republican members of the Legislature.

For once in the history of this country both of the great political parties are united—and that is in the hope that President Garfield will recover. The Democrats as keenly appreciate the situation as do the Republicans, and there is a profound solicitude among the Democrats regarding the condition of the President as there possibly can be in the Republican party.

Two men—an Irishman and a Swede—sailed from Bangor, Maine, on the 5th instant for Europe, in a boat 14 feet long and 5 feet wide. It is the smallest craft which ever undertook to make a voyage across the Atlantic. They are skilled seamen and took provisions sufficient to last 60 days. It may be considered morally certain that they will never reach the other side.

In this hour of national sorrow it is gratifying to note the deep solicitude Europe takes in the condition of President Garfield. In fact from every part of the civilized world come words of sympathy and hope. People in far off parts of the world who are far different from our race, whose institutions, language and religion are far from ours, love America and deeply honor the President, and from them comes warm-hearted condolence. When an American thinks of these things, it makes him love his country with a more abiding love than ever.

A great many well-informed persons who attempt to quote the declaration of independence, make that immortal document say that “all men are created free and equal.” Even Henry Ward Beecher, and many other famous orators, use the quotation as given above, whereas the declaration says not such a thing. Men are not created “free” and the declaration of independence does not say they are. All men may be created equal, and Thomas Jefferson said they were, but he never said they were born free, because they were not. There is a good deal of ignorance regarding the declaration of independence, and it was the fashion of Thurlow Weed, when he published the Albany Journal, to print the declaration in full on the day before the fourth of July.

It is hoped that Depew will be thrown overboard in the contest in New York! He is not just the man the Republicans want in the United States Senate. He is a man of considerable ability, is an able lawyer, but he is not a good representative man. He represents the interests of the powerful corporations in that State, and not the important and everyday interests of the people. Beside all this, there is a general impression that money has been used in the attempt to secure his nomination. It has not been proved that money has been used, but the opinion prevails that it has been brought into the canvass, though not at the request of Mr. Depew. These are important reasons why he should not be elected. There is better senatorial timber in New York than that in Mr. Depew, and it should be utilized. For the interest of the country as well as of the Republican party, it would be a wise and judicious thing to drop Depew.

PATRIOTIC SENTIMENTS.

Patriotic Remarks from Ex-Senator Conkling on the Assassination of President Garfield.

New York, July 5.—Ex-Senator Conkling being asked his opinion of the situation and the way some newspapers are disposed to treat it, said:

“The assault upon President Garfield is an astounding assault upon the nation. The shot fired by a madman is a shot fired at all of us. No language can overstate the enormity of the deed. There is, however, no occasion for public apprehension or excitement. Our fathers foresaw even such dire possibilities and provided for them. The constitution points out just what shall be done in such an emergency. The Vice President, on the death of the President, instantly succeeds, and the government goes on as if no change had occurred. In this case the Vice President is an upright, brave, able man, abundantly qualified for the great task which Providence may have in store for him. In his hand no harm will come to the public interests. He is thoroughly patriotic. To strive to array hostility against him at such an hour, is unquestionably wicked and treasonable. No patriot whatever his position, can do anything now till the shadow passes by, but to bear up the hand of the Vice President.

COLLEGE DOINGS.

Commencement Week at Milton,
With Its Varied Programme.

The Orations of the Graduating Class and Other Exercises.

In Chapel and On Campus.

The commencement doings at Milton college opened Friday evening, June 24, with a sermon by Rev. D. E. Maxson, D. D., delivered before the Christian association. His theme was "Moral Culture," and his text in Ezekiel 44:23—"And they shall teach my people the difference between the holy and the profane and cause them to discern between the unclean and clean." The discourse was an excellent one.

THE PHILOMATHIAN SOCIETY held a public session Saturday evening June 25. Prof. W. F. Place offered prayer. M. T. Cole gave the salutary oration "Light and Shadows" being his theme. W. B. Millar delivered "The Polish Boy" excellently. Charles E. Hull gave an oration on "Bondage." A paper edited by B. J. Curtis, attributed to L. M. Curtis, and read by A. C. Dunn followed. B. J. Curtis gave an excellent oration on "The Golden Mean." F. W. Bentley gave a spirited enology on "The Prince of Orange."

THE BACCALAUREATE SERMON was preached by President T. R. Williams, in the chapel, Sunday evening, June 26. His theme was "The benevolent results of social culture and the means of acquiring it." His text was found in Psalms 144:11-12—"Rid me and deliver me from the hand of strange children, whose mouth speaketh vanity, and their right hand is a right hand of falsehood; that our sons may be as plants grown up in their youth; that our daughters may be as corner stones, polished after the similitude of a palace." The sermon was both elegant and eloquent, and closely held the attention of all.

THE IDONA LYCEUM.

On Monday evening the Idunas gave a most pleasing exhibition, even outdoing themselves. Mrs. O. U. Whitford offered the opening prayer. Excellent music was furnished by Misses Hakes, Haven and Millar. "The Mission of Trial" was the title of an oration by Miss Maggie J. Davis. Miss Addie M. Randolph gave some pleasant thoughts on "Sunrise and Sunset." A class of seven young ladies rendered Poet's "Bells." Miss Laura A. Miller gave an oration on "The Morally Beautiful." Miss Mary A. Chukow... gave an excellent address. Mrs. A. G. Saunders read a tender memorial of Mrs. Eva Worthing Osborne. Mrs. H. A. Miller gave an oration on "The Nature and Scope of Education."

THE OROPHILIAN LYCEUM.

The public session of this society was on Tuesday evening. The music was provided by Messrs. Brown, Anderson, Post and Ferris. Dr. T. R. Williams offered prayer. G. M. Henderson gave an oration on "The Moral Law." C. F. Page strongly denounced "The Mormon Power." Wallace McGowan had for his theme "Joan D'Arc." W. D. Thomas orated well on "Demosthenes." "The Orophilian Standard" was edited and read by D. F. Brown. A. A. Miller gave the closing address on "Respectable Begging."

CLASS TREE EXERCISES.

On the afternoon of commencement day the class tree exercises were held. Miss E. E. Whitaker gave an excellent class poem. M. J. Whitford gave the class history. The total weight of the class was declared to be 894 pounds, an average of 127 pounds; total height 38 feet 5½ inches, an average of 5 feet 6 inches, the shortest being 5 feet 2 inches, and weighing only 100 pounds. The largest stood 5 feet 9½ inches, and weighed 152 pounds. The age of the youngest was 18, and the oldest 27 years. The total age was 155 years, and the average 22 years. Five were natives of this State, two of New York. J. C. Bartholomew gave a humorous class prophecy. M. G. Stillman presented some reflections on the qualifications of the average college graduate. D. F. Brown spoke of "Our College." Prof. W. F. Place gave the dedicatory address of the class tree. All joined with M. J. Whitford in singing the class song.

THE ALUMNI.

The exercises of the alumni followed. H. W. Rodd gave the annual address. W. P. Clarke gave some pleasing reminiscences of the earlier college life at Milton. Elder D. E. Maxson, of Alfred, N. Y., called up early recollections of Alfred university and of Milton college. He then pleaded the cause of the latter. It was under a total debt of $9,500, of which $4,700 was already subscribed. George H. Babcock, of Plainfield, N. J., made a short but telling speech to the effect that if the Milton people would pay the debt he would give the college $10,000 as an endowment, and that if the alumni and college friends would make an endowment of $10,000, he would give another $10,000. This same gentleman recently donated to Alfred university $30,000. Following his proposition came a call for subscriptions, and $3,200 was secured at once. Later in the day a telegram was received from Ezra Goodrich, from Rockford, stating that Mr. J. Davis would donate all but $1,500 of his claim upon the college, so that the payment of the debt was virtually provided for, and the additional $10,000 from Mr. Babcock thus secured.

THE SENIOR CONCERT.

was held in the evening at the S. D. B. church, the music being given by the Milton Concert band. The audience was large and delighted. At the close of the concert the band serenaded Mr. Babcock, at the residence of Rev. E. M. Dunn, and following this was a social reunion in the chapel.

Kidney Complaint Cured.

B. Turner, Rochester, N. Y., writes: "I have been for over a year subject to serious disorder of the kidneys, and often unable to attend to business; I procured your Balsam Blood Bitters and was relieved before half a bottle was used. I intend to continue, as I feel confident that they will entirely cure me." Price $1.00, trial size 10 cents.

The Anatomy of an Oyster.

Every oyster has a mouth, a heart, a liver, a stomach, cunningly devised intestines and other necessary organs, just as all living, moving and intelligent creatures have. And all these things are covered from man's rudest inquisitive gaze by a mantle of pearly guaze, whose wool and warp put to shame the front lace on your windows in winter. The mouth is at the smaller end of the oyster, adjoining the hinge. It is of oval shape, and though not readily seen by an unpracticed eye, its location and size can be easily discovered by gently pushing a blunt bodkin or similar instrument along the surface of the locality mentioned. When the spot is found your bodkin can be thrust between the delicate lips and a considerable distance down towards the stomach without causing the oyster to yield with pain. From this mouth is, of course, a sort of canal to convey food to the stomach, whence it passes into the intestines. With an exceedingly delicate and sharp knife you can take off the "mantle" of the oyster, when there will be disclosed to you a half-moon shaped space just above the muscle, or so-called "heart." This space is the oyster's pericardium, and within it is the real heart, the pulsations of which are readily seen. This heart is made up of two parts, just as the human heart is, one of which receives the blood from the gills through a network of blood vessels, and the other drives the blood out through arteries. In this important matter the oyster differs in no respect from other warm or cold-blooded animals. And no one need laugh incredulously at the assertion that oysters have blood. It is not ruddy, according to the accepted notion about blood, but it is nevertheless blood to all oyster intents and purposes. In the same vicinity and in marvelously proper positions, will be found all the other organs named. But it is very proper to be incredulous about that heart and organs. At first glance it would seem that they are useless, for the mouth cannot snap around for food, and the oyster has no arms wherewith to grab its dinner or lunch. True apparently, but only apparently, for each oyster has more than a thousand arms, tiny, delicate, almost invisible. And each one of them is incessantly at work gathering up food and gently pushing it into the lazy mouth of the indolently comfortable creature. The gills are the thin flaps so notably perceptible around the front face part of the undressed oyster, below the muscle. Each of these gills is covered with minute hair-like arms, very close together and perpetually in motion and to fro in the same unweary direction. They catch food from the water, strain it carefully of improper substances, and wash it upward over the mantle's smooth surface to the gaping mouth, which placidly gobbles it up until hunger is appeased, and then the body goes to sleep without turning over. Any one can observe this singular process of feeding by placing a minute quantity of some harmless coloring matter on the gills. If it will not offend the oyster's delicate palate the coloring matter will be seen at once propelled by invisible hands towards the mouth and thence slowly down into the stomach. And this is all I know about oyster anatomy, except that the liver almost entirely surrounds the stomach and is of a dark green color. It may be now, however, to many to know that oysters are born precisely the same way the shad and other fish come into the world. A well educated lady oyster will lay about 125,000,000 eggs—so it is said; I have not counted enough of them to strike such a large average—and every one of those eggs will ultimately become fit for stew or fry if they escape the multitude of perils that do environ the infant oyster.

Our Ruby Throat.

Many times a day, as I sit at work by my window, in the genial months of summer, there breaks in on my ear from the garden outside a series of quick, faint, sweet chirps, not louder than the notes of a cricket, yet far more musical, and turning swiftly—for I know the sounds well—I desire a humminbird floating like a live emerald amid my flowers. As it plumbs its bill into their dainty beakers it murmurs its happy content in soft, satisfied tones like the cooing of a babe at its mother's breast. I snatch the opera-glass always standing ready for such occasions, and make a study of my fairy visitor as long as it remains in sight. Hovering in the air on wings vibrating so rapidly that we hear rather than see their marvelous motion, the bird pauses in front of each inviting blossom a moment or more in a keenly searching attitude, as if to prove the full promise enticing it forward are yielding itself up to the warm allurement.

Probing this cup of nectar and passing by that, its choice among the flowers appears to be dictated by a purely capricious fancy. Yet it is really intent on an errand somewhat different from what is generally suspected, the tiny insects which ride the flowers of their honeyed treasures forming the chief charm which attracts it toward them. It is fond of the perfumed syrup distilled in their painted laboratories, but takes it in the way of a relish, or a dressing for the fleasty morsels hidden in their deep recesses, which it seizes with the delicate forceps tipping its tubular tongue. Thus that which seems to be more wayward coquetry with a bevy of beautiful blossoms is in truth the exercise of a wise selection, the nature of the humminbird demanding a more substantial diet than the banquet of sweets served up in the heart of a fragrant corolla.

As a rule, the nimble sphynx departs entirely upon its pinions for support while gleanings its food from floral positions, yet I often observe it resting on its slender feet when the chance is offered. For instance, if albatross happens to project directly under a seductive blossom, it accepts of the vantage-ground, though with an air of an unaccustomed proceeding. It drops its slim legs, usually tucked out of sight in billows of down, and stands perfectly still on the green pedestal, with wings quite and even folded, until the quick repeat is over. I have especially noticed this interesting performance with plants of the balsam family (Balsaminea), where the flowers spring from the axils, and one or two in every group, resting just over a leaf, prove awkward to reach unless the bird interrupts its flight and takes their enticing tidbits standing.

These feathered sun-flakes which make a hunting ground of my garden are in the habit of taking a rest from their clin courses on the dry twigs stretching out here and there beyond the green boughs of an oak in view of my window. Here they perch for varying intervals, sometimes for many minutes, perhaps a half-hour together. On first alighting, they busy themselves with affairs of the toilet, combing their glossy plumes with their diminutive claws and drawing the wing feathers one by one through the narrowly opened beak, which is afterward cleaned and polished by rubbing it back and forth vigorously against the perch. This careful process finally accomplished, the glistening atoms sit for a while in a beatific state of contemplation, now motionless, and dreamy, and again pooring about from side to side, with their long sharp bill thrust outward like an emphasized note of interrogation.—Mrs. Sara A. Hubbard, in Harper's Magazine.

A Girl's Foot Blockades a Street.

Thefeat was achieved in San Francisco, and the Chronicle tells how the blockade was caused and how raised: A young lady took a car which brought her to the foot of California Street and there took a seat on the dummy car, which bore her to the vicinity of her home on Octavia Street. As she left the car and was crossing the track on the southern side her foot slipped and turned and was caught fast in the crack where the wire-cable passes. Some imperfection in the roadbed had caused the narrow aperture to expand and the young girl's narrow foot was entrapped.

The engineer of the east-bound dummy saw the obstacle on the road in season to check his swift-approaching car and alighted with the conductor and several passengers of investigating mind, who endeavored to release the slender foot, but their efforts were in vain. Another car and another brought up in funeral row, and constant reinforcements in the way of passing pedestrians cheered and enlivened the scene. An attempt was made to pry the iron rails forming the cable channel further apart, but they firmly resisted all efforts. Everybody had a suggestion. "Push your foot forward!" "Pull it back!" "Tip it sideways!" "Lift your heel higher!" The unhappy girl was almost fainting, but she persevered in her efforts to extricate the offending member. By this time travel on the road virtually ceased. The last car had long ago passed, and was steadily approaching to full line at the rear of the singular procession. Down-town passengers, fatigued and fumed or slowly climbed the hill in disgust. On every street corner groups of waiting people berated the laxity of street car management. Reporters from all the down-town dailies were proceeding westward to learn the meaning of the large crowd reported to have assembled in the western addition. From the scene of the accident envoys had been dispatched to the railroad shops to bring appliances for taking up a section of the road. At this juncture a tall, brawny Englishman, in the dress of a mechanic, forced his way through the throng, and in a cheery voice, marked by the Derbyshire dialect, asked:

"Ha' ye tried onfasterin' the young lady's shoe?"

Ten buttons flew from as many button holes; in the twinkling of an eye the foot was free.

An historical tree has lately been destroyed in Greece—a cypress, described by Pausanias 400 years B. C., and one of the two largest in the Peloponnesus. Some 160 feet high, the tree had a diameter at the base of ten feet and a circumference of twenty-five feet at man's height, and of 240 feet where the branches were most developed. Some careless gypsies camping in its shade set fire to the tree, not a vestige surviving. Now the only giant tree left in the province is a huge plantain near Nangactus, on the Gulf of Lepanto, which is equally large, but some six centuries younger.

RESCUED FROM DEATH.

The following statement of William J. Coughlin, of Somerville, Mass., is so remarkable that we beg to ask for the attention of our readers. He says: "In the fall of 1876, I was taken with violent bleeding of the lungs, followed by a severe cough. I soon began to lose my appetite and flesh. I was so weak at times that I could not leave my bed. In the spring of 1877 I was admitted to the City Hospital. While there the doctors said I had a hole in my left lung as big as a half dollar, and I expended over a hundred dollars in doctors and medicines. I was so far gone at one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR. WM. HALL'S BALM FOR THE LUNGS. I laughed at my friends, thinking that my case was incurable, but I got a bottle to satisfy them when, to my surprise and gratification, I commenced to feel better. My hope once dead began to revive, and to-day I feel in better spirits than I have the past three years."

"I write this hoping you will publish it, so that everyone afflicted with Disease Lung will be induced take DR. WM. HALL'S BALM FOR THE LUNGS."

I have taken two bottles, and can positively say that it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness. My cough has almost entirely disappeared, and I shall soon be able to go to work.

Sold by druggists.

FILTER.

Thus avoiding frequent repacking, and delivering water after filtration, above sediment and other impurities, and having a polished iron, has a reservoir for ice if you wish and is easily moved.

One was sent to W. G. Wheelock & Son, Druggists, Boston, last year, and Mr. S. Raymond, Druggist, and Mr. J. C. Hall, Manufacturer, Boston, Mass.

The result was so satisfactory and exceedingly pleasing, filling the bulb perfectly, that a stock

Mexico's Immense Resources.

So much has been said and written about the resources of Mexico, and so little has been made out of them that a shadow of distrust overclouds the glowing eulogies of all the travelers; but the testimony is uniform, and at the risk of being discredit as a new addition to the long list of Mulberry Sellers who swarm here, I can only join in the general voice which proclaims Mexico the world's wonder and the richest of all the lands of the earth in the production of nature. Its mining wealth has hardly been scratched. While we have reached a depth of nearly 3,000 feet on the Comstock and hand up ore by the ton in the rock elevator the Mexican miner in the Pacific district climbs down 700 feet on poles with pegs stuck in them, with an empty bag on his back, and climbs back with his bag full of ore—say eighty pounds—and his labor is less effective at fifty cents a day than that of the Comstocker at four dollars. Yet, with this crude labor Mexico has managed to produce nearly half of the whole world's supply of gold and silver since the days of Tubal Cain. There is not a blast furnace in the land, but the iron mountain of Durango could furnish all the world with ore for a generation, and there are 900,000,000 tons lying above the surface in Michoacan. Coal has never been mined, but now there is hardly a week that some new coal discovery is not located or "denounced," as they call it here. There is copper enough in Mexico to bring down the price one-half. There is quicksilver and lead, nickel, antimony, tin, zinc. As for sulphur and chemicals the great laboratories of nature are still at work producing them.

BRIEFLISTS.

—Rather warm.

—Everybody calling for cold drinks.

—Gypsies are encamped near the city, with a fine stock of horses.

—The Janesville Mutuals defeated the Waukesha club on the Fourth by a score of 8 to 5.

—The contract for furnishing 350 tons of hard coal to the Institution for the Blind has been awarded to Hogboom & Atwood at $0.75 a ton.

—Clem Ellison is reported as having purchased a fast stepper to-day, which has no record, but promises to make a fine one, after being brought into training.

—A large and convenient coal house is to be built at the Institution for the Blind. The mason work is to be done by Rutherford & Andrews and the wood work by William Buck.

—Last evening the Orpheus club had their rehearsal at the home of their director, Prof. Titcomb. A pleasant social season was indulged in, which was heartily enjoyed by all the members.

—The ladies of the Baptist church have a lawn party this evening at the home of J. A. Leland, No. 39 Bluff street, to which all are invited. The Bower City band are to furnish music, and ice cream will be among the cold refreshments served.

—The Municipal court at Madison had seven Fourth of July drunks to dispose of, although there was no celebration there. The like court at Janesville had only one such case, despite the public celebration here, and the great crowd which thronged the streets.

—A goodly number from here expect to attend the sangerfest at Madison next Sunday, and an excursion train with the Bower City band for music, will leave here at 7 o'clock in the morning. The tickets are $1.60 for the round trip and are on sale at King's book-store.

—As will be seen by a card in another column Britton & Kimball still keep before the public. Their stock of furniture was never more complete, and it embraces some very elegant goods. Those wanting anything in this line should bear this firm in mind, for their stock and figures need only to be inspected to convince one of the superiority of the goods and the lowness of the prices.

THE WEATHER.

REPORTED BY PRENTICE & EVANSON, DRUGGISTS.

The thermometer at 6 o'clock last night stood at 91 degrees above; at 10 o'clock A. M. to day at 74 degrees above; at 7 o'clock A. M., at 72 degrees above, and at 1 o'clock P. M. at 87 degrees above. Partly cloudy.

The indications to-day are, slightly warmer, fair weather, northerly winds, becoming variable, and stationary or lower barometer.

DROWNING OF MISS CLINTON.

The sad news which came by telegram concerning the drowning of Miss Lulu Clinton at Madison, on the Fourth, has caused much sorrow among friends here, of whom Miss Clinton had not a few, she having visited here frequently. Miss Clinton's body has been recovered, and the funeral services are to be held at Waupun, where she has lived so long. The following additional facts we glean from the State Journal:

The accident Monday forenoon on Lake Mendota, by which Miss Lulu Clinton, of this city, met her death, seems to have been one which might have been easily avoided. It seems that the young lady was one of a picnic party in two boats, one of which contained Miss Clinton, her sister and two young men, Messrs. Todd and Holm. In the other boat were Miss Clinton's mother and one or two others. Just beyond Maple Bluff, not more than ten rods from the shore, the boat containing the Misses Clinton and the two young men, began to fill. The waves were high at the time, the boat, which was quite unseaworthy, became unmanageable and was capsized and rolled over by the waves. The occupants clung to the boat as long as possible, but just as help arrived, Miss Clinton lost her hold and was swept away. The two young men and Miss Emma were rescued, thanks to the efforts of Fisherman Sylvester, who put out from the shore to the rescue.

AN UGLY ASSAULT.

Mrs. Chrystie Heller, a widow lady living near Hanover, was grievously assaulted on Fourth of July night. There was a dance on the green near her home, and she was in attendance, and as she was about to leave, a man followed her, caught her by the arm, and whispered something in her ear. She could not understand what he said, but she told him to go away and leave her alone. He hurried out of sight, and she being frightened came back to the dance. After a time she started again for home, and on the way, either was suddenly confronted by a man who pushed her down. She screamed and then he struck her twice, once on the cheek, the other blow cutting open her nose. The assailant then fled. Mrs. Heller claims that the man who thus assaulted her was Charles Sebell, and she has had him arrested. This morning Constable Cutts brought the prisoner before the municipal court, and the case was adjourned for a week, Sebell giving $100 deposit in cash for his appearance.

THANKFUL FOR FAVORS.

The treatment which the Lake City Guards, of Madison, received on their visit here on the Fourth, seems to have been highly satisfactory to them, according to the State Journal, which says: The Lake Cities were marched to the Janesville Guards armory, where their arms were stacked, and then proceeded to the Myers house for dinner, after which they may have been seen in squads under the careful guidance of the Janesville Guards, who seemed to have taken them into hand in order to make their stay a pleasant one. That their efforts were successful has been already proven by the loud praises of the Lake Cities who will only wait with anxiety for an opportunity to show them that their generosity and kindness were not unappreciated.

The especial feature was the display of fireworks by the Janesville Guards escorting the Highlanders and the Lake Cities to the depot; this alone was enough to make our boys feel deeply grateful to the Guards.

A. GRAND CHANCE.

Zet the Capitalists of Janesville Act Wisely and Promptly.

The fire of yesterday morning, by which Notholm Bros., flouring mill was burned, has let free a water power privilege, which ought now to be turned to greater advantage to the city and to capital. While a flouring mill is, of course, an enterprise worthy of the appearance, yet it employs little help and not nearly as much capital as could be well invested in some other enterprise—for instance, another cotton factory.

At present there is a great amount of capital here, which is lying idle, subject to an occasional loan, but even at extremely low rates of interest. The success which has attended the cotton factory already established here is an assurance that another mill, if wisely managed, would prove a profitable investment to thousands of dollars now earning comparatively little. A cotton factory not only employs a large amount of capital, and gives it a good return, but also employs a large number of hands, and thus adds greatly to the prosperity of the town in all respects. With the history of the present factory before the citizens there is little need of urging the fact that it is a grand help to both capital and labor, whose workings are the foundation of all material prosperity.

The water power which has been used for the Notholm mill could probably be secured, and it could be so arranged as to run a factory where hundreds of hands could find employment and thousands of dollars could find profitable investment; and with the amount of capital now lying comparatively idle here, there would be little difficulty in securing subscriptions for the necessary stock, if enterprising and reliable citizens would make the start.

There are some peculiar advantages which such a factory would have, which the present prosperous factory did not have when it started. Building material is not so high as then. More than that, the factory has gained for Janesville the reputation of being a point at which most excellent cotton goods are made. Trade has been made to flow here naturally and the present factory has no trouble in selling all its goods, and could sell many times its present production.

The difference in the cost of building, the advantages gained by experience, the reputation established for Janesville goods, would be great help to the success of a new factory, and as one well informed gentleman puts it, "would be worth $50,000 to $75,000 to such a factory." There are many other facts which all point to this time as an excellent one for a start toward another cotton factory. Clear heads, strong hearts, and quick hands are now needed, that this opportunity for helping capital and labor be not slighted.
